JAPRISOT, SÉBASTIEN (Jean-Baptiste Rossi / July 5, 1931, Marseille, Bouches-du-Rhône, France–March 4, 2003, Vichy, Allier, France)

Of Italian descent, he was educated by the Jesuits and completed his studies at the Sorbonne University. In 1950, when he was only eighteen years old, he published a critically acclaimed first novel, Les Mal-Partis (Robert Laffont). Three years later, he translated into French J. D. Salinger's The Catcher in the Rye. In the 1950s, he earned his living as an advertising chief for two Parisian agencies. In 1960, he met producer Pierre Braunberger, who financed his three shorts. Under the pseudonym of Sébastien Japrisot (an anagram of his name), he published two detective novels written in fifteen days. They were immediately adapted by himself and brought to the screen by André Cayatte (1965 Piège pour Cendrillon / Non sono un'assassino / UK and USA: A Trap for Cinderella, France / Italy) and Costa-Gavras (1965 Compartment Tueurs / UK: The Sleeping Car Murder / USA: The Sleeping Car Murders). He became much in demand as a screenwriter (1968 Adieu l'Ami / Due sporche carogne / Tecnica di una rapina / USA: Farewell, Friend / Honor Among Thieves, as screenwriter, co-adapter, dialogist, Jean Herman, France / Italy; 1969 Le Passager de la Pluie / L'uomo venuto dalla pioggia / USA: Rider on the Rain / US video, as author of original novel, screenwriter, René Clément, France / Italy; 1970 The Lady in the Car with Glasses and a Gun / La Dame dans l'Auto avec des Lunettes et un Fusil, as author of original novel, co-screenwriter, co-adapter, co-dialogist, Anatole Litvak, UK / France; 1972 La Course du Lièvre à travers les Champs / La corsa della lepre attraverso i campi / USA: And Hope to Die, as screenwriter, adapter, dialogist, René Clément, France / Italy; 1975 Histoire d'O / Die Geschichte der O. / USA: The Story of O, as screenwriter, adapter, dialogist, Just Jaeckin, France / West Germany; 1983 L'Été meurtrier / USA: One Deadly Summer, as author of original novel, as screenwriter, adapter, dialogist, Jean Becker; 1999 Les Enfants du Marais / UK: The Children of Marshland, as screenwriter, adapter, dialogist, Jean Becker; 2001 Un Crime au Paradis / UK and USA: A Crime in Paradise, as co-screenwriter, co-adapter, co-dialogist, Jean Becker). After his death, Jean-Pierre Jeunet adapted his novel Un Long Dimanche de Fiançailles / USA: A Very Long Engagement (2004, France / USA).

JASSET, VICTORIN (Victorin-Hippolyte Jasset / March 30, 1862, Fumay, Ardennes, France—June 22, 1913, Paris, France)

A pupil of the sculptor Dalou, he was devoted to fan painting and was a costume designer before directing pantomimes and ballets. He also created costumes and drew the poster for a historical show, Vercingétorix, which opened the Place Clichy's racecourse in 1900. He met future director Georges Hatot, who recruited extras for the show. Hatot introduced him to Pathé, where he spent some time before being hired by Gaumont as an assistant director (co-director?), production designer, and costume designer (1906 La Vie du Christ / La Naissance, la Vie et la Mort de Notre-Seigneur / La Passion / USA: The Birth, the Life and Death of Jesus Christ, Alice Guy). He and Hatot joined a new production company, L'Eclipse, in 1906, then he created the first French film serial (Nick Carter) for another society, L'éclair. In 1910, he ended his collaboration with Hatot and became an artistic manager for L'éclair. In June 1913, he had to interrupt the shooting of his adaptation of Jules Verne's The Children of Captain Grant to undergo a surgical operation and died of complications thereof at age fifty-one.

JOLIVET, PIERRE-ALAIN (May 15, 1935, Paris, France—)

The son of composer André Jolivet, he obtained a degree in letters before completing his literary and theatrical studies at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine, USA. Having returned to France, he learned acting at the Ecole de la Rue Blanche with Berthe Bovy and at the Cours Dullin with such teachers as Jean Vilar and Philippe Noiret. After landing parts in TV and cinema, he joined the Renaud-Barrault group. At age twenty-two, he directed two plays (Mala, Jean Laugier; Unchained Prometheus, Aeschylus) at Théâtre du Tertre. Discharged from his military service in Algeria after twenty-eight months, he created his first play, Nos Femmes, in 1966 and met the members of the Panique group (Arrabal, Jodorowsky, Topor). The same year, he made his film directing debut. From 1974 to 1978, he gave up cinema and was involved in David Cooper's antipsychiatric movement. He resumed his stage directing career (Le Client, Jean-Claude Carrière) and spent nine years in Canada after the shooting of Black Mirror. He came back to France in 1989 and is still active.

JOSIPOVICI, JEAN (Jean-François Josipovici / August 8, 1914, Triel-Sur-Seine, Val-d'Oise, France–June 25, 1992, Rossano, Italy)

The son of a diplomat father, he grew up in Cairo, where he was initiated into sufism and Coptic religion at age fifteen. A few years later, he returned to France and, following philosopher Henri Bergson's advice, completed his studies at Aix-en-Provence University. Having graduated in law and as a doctor of letters at age twenty-three with his thesis Fragments de Vie intérieure, he published an essay (1939, Lettre à Jean Giono, Grasset), a collection of short stories (1945 Etrange comme la Vie, Editions des Deux Rives), and a novel (1946 Bellecuisse, Editions des Deux Rives). Also a playwright (1950 Docteur Hinterland), he co-wrote three of Edmond T. Gréville's movies (1945 Dorothée cherche l'Amour; 1947 Pour une Nuit d'Amour, as co-dialogist; Le Diable souffle, as co-adapter) and two Italian productions (1953 L'uomo, la bestia e la virtù / UK and USA: Man, Beast and Virtue, Steno = Stefano Vanzina; 1972 Spara Joe . . . e così sia! / USA: Joe Dakota / Shoot Joe, and Shoot Again, Emilio P. Miraglia). Married to French actress Viviane Romance (1912–1991), he directed her three times before divorcing and moving to Italy. After working as an assistant director to Carlo Ludovico Bragaglia (1960 Gli amori di Ercole / Les Amours d'Hercule / USA: The Loves of Hydra / US TV: Hercules vs the Hydra / Hercules and the Hydra, Italy / France) and making a final directing effort, he studied Raja Yoga and created his own therapy (transforming negative vibrations into a positive energy). He still authored several esoteric books that were published in Italy (1975 La prigionie esoterica; 1976 Il fattore; 1977 Catarsi di Maria Maddalena; 1978 La scienza oscurantista; 1982 Iniziazione alla felicità; 1986 L'avventura spirituale di Anton Mesmer; 1987 Sotto l'azzurro del tuo cielo; 1988 Suite).

KIRCHNER, BRUNO-MARIO (Bruno Mario Kirchner-Demicini / 1943, Athens, Greece–)

While studying law and the history of art at the University of Graz, Austria, he was the pupil of painter Reno Ernst Jungel and collaborated on a theatrical review and three documentaries. In 1965, he went to France to complete his studies and soon worked as an assistant director, actor, screenwriter, editor, script supervisor, sound engineer, or technical adviser on French, Swiss, Italian, German, and Norwegian movies, including fifty feature-length films and about 100 shorts and commercials (1965–1969). In 1970, he resumed his studies and enrolled in the University of Paris VII, where he attended psychology courses. After directing two films, he settled in California and earned his living working for TV and cinema. He published short stories and three collections of poems and dedicated much of his time to painting. Having returned to Paris in 1981, he exhibited his drawings and aquarelles and won the Gold Medal at the Salon Léonard de Vinci (1984).

KIRSANOFF, DIMITRI (Marc David Kaplan / March 6, 1899, Dorpat, Russia–February 11, 1957, Paris, France)

He arrived in France with his family a few months after the Bolshevik Revolution. Having trained at the Ecole Normale de Musique of Paris, he became a violinist and played with the Ciné Max Linder orchestra. Seeing movies day after day, he soon fell in love with cinema. The first pictures he directed made him a major figure in avant-garde films. This lasted until the arrival of sound. From the 1930s to his last directed effort in 1957, he shot only documentaries and average motion pictures. Other credit (as uncredited co-screenwriter): 1956 L'Odyssée du Capitaine Steve / Walk Into Paradise / USA: Walk into Hell (Marcello Pagliero, Lee Robinson, France / Australia). His first wife, Nadia Sibirskaïa (Germaine Lebas, 1900–1980) starred in several of his films. His second, Monique Kirsanoff (b. 1913), was a film editor.

KOMOR, SERGE (Serge Komerovsky / July 29, 1929, Nice, Alpes-Maritimes, France—March 29, 1986, Paris, France)

Of Russian descent, he was the son of Leonide Komerovsky, a former assistant to Abel Gance and a production manager for Films Albatros (a film company led by Russians settled in Paris). He appeared as an extra in several movies, including Vénus aveugle (Abel Gance, 1941), and landed several jobs at the Victorine Studios in Nice. He worked as a unit producer (1959 Mademoiselle Ange / Ein Engel auf Erden / USA: An Angel on Wheels / An Angel on Earth, Geza von Radvanyi, France / West Germany), production manager (1960 Tirez sur le Pianiste / UK: Shoot the Pianist / Canada: Shoot the Piano Player, François Truffaut), and assistant director (1966 A 077, sfida ai killers / Bob Fleming . . . Mission Casablanca / 077 défie les Tueurs / USA: Killers Are Challenged, Anthony M. Dawson = Antonio Margheriti, France / Italy). Actress Marie-France Pisier made her film debut with him. He introduced the seventeen-year-old performer to François Truffaut, who hired her to play Colette in L'Amour à Vingt Ans. His poor health (he suffered from Parkinson's disease) disrupted and finally broke his career. He was an assistant to his brother, TV director Youri, for a TV movie shot in Nice (1968 L'Ombre blanche).

KORBER, SERGE (February 1, 1936, Paris, France—)

He made his acting debut at the cabaret Le Cheval d’Or before working as a lighting designer for shows of such singers as Edith Piaf and Gilbert Bécaud (1961–1962) and managing the famous Olympia music hall. After playing small parts in two movies (1961 Tire-au-Flanc 62 / USA: The Army Game, Claude de Givray, François Truffaut; 1962 Cléo de 5 à 7 / Cleo dalle 5 alle 7 / USA: Cleo from 5 to 7, Agnès Varda, France / Italy), he made his directing debut in 1962 and notably tried to give some original tone to the two vehicles of Louis de Funès that he filmed. From 1975 to 1979, he chose the pseudonym of John Thomas (a reference to D. H. Lawrence’s Lady Chatterley’s Lover) to sign porn flicks (1975 Hard Love / Jeunes Filles perverses / La Vie sentimentale de Walter Petit / French video: Désirs intenses / Ijsk(l)ontjes voor een hete bliksem, also screenwriter, France / Belgium; A Bout de Sexe / Un Grand Coup dans le Pare-Chocs; 1976 L’Odyssée de l’Extase; L’Essayeuse; Excès / Jeanne et Paul; Hurlements de Plaisir; 1977 Cailles sur Canapé; Pornotissimo; 1979 The Nibblers). KRAUSS, CHARLES (1871, France—October 22, 1926, Paris, France)

He studied engraving at the Beaux-Arts and exhibited his own works. Spotted by a Belgian impresario, he made his stage debut at the Alhambra in the early years of the twentieth century. A romantic leading man, he notably portrayed Hamlet and Ruy Blas before joining the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre group. In 1908, he was hired by Éclair, one of the main French film companies. From his first screen appearance (1908 L'Honneur du Corsaire / USA: A Pirate's Honor, Victorin Jasset) to 1917 (Requins, André Hugon), he starred in about sixty films. He shot his first movie in 1912. Mobilized in 1914, he resumed his directing career in 1918, going to Italy at producer Gustavo Lombardo's invitation. He was the younger brother of director and actor Henry Krauss.

KYROU, ADO (Adonis Kyrou / October 18, 1923, Athens, Greece–November 4, 1985, Paris, France)

Greek born, he settled in Paris after World War II and became very close to the surrealists. After meeting two of them, Robert Benayoun and Gérard Legrand, who were also film critics, he began writing about movies in Saint-Germain-des-Prés and L'Âge du Cinéma, the latter a review he founded. From 1953 to 1970, he collaborated on Positif. An adept and a defender of an erotic, dreamlike, and poetic cinema, he expressed his point of view in several books: 1952 Le Surréalisme au Cinéma (Arcanes, republished in 1963 by Le Terrain Vague; reedited in 2005 by Ramsay); 1957 Amour, Erotisme et Cinéma (Le Terrain Vague; reedited in 1967 by Eric Losfeld); 1962 Luis Buñuel (Collection Cinéastes d'aujourd'hui, Seghers). He directed several shorts and two feature-length films (the second, Le Moine, was an adaptation of Mathew G. Lewis's gothic masterpiece co-written by Luis Buñuel and Jean-Claude Carrière; Buñuel should have shot the movie). He died of a heart attack at age sixty-two.

LEGRAND, MICHEL (February 24, 1932, Paris, France—)

The son of composer and bandleader Raymond Legrand (1908–1974), he entered the Paris Conservatory at age eleven. Having graduated with a first prize for solfège the following year and a first prize for harmony at age seventeen, he started his professional career as an accompanist for famous French singers (Juliette Gréco, Henri Salvador, Catherine Sauvage, Maurice Chevalier, Zizi Jeanmaire). He soon began writing successful songs. In 1952, he had his first contact with cinema as an actor (1952 Son Dernier Noël, Jacques Daniel-Norman). From 1952

(Le Témoin de Minuit, co-composer with Raymond Legrand, Dimitri Kirsanoff) to 2008 (Disco, Fabien Onteniente), he scored more than 170 movies, including memorable Jacques Demy musicals (1964 Les Parapluies de Cherbourg / Die Regenschirme von Cherbourg / The Umbrellas of Cherbourg, Jacques Demy, France / West Germany; 1967 Les Demoiselles de Rochefort / USA: The Young Girls of Rochefort; 1970 Peau d'Âne / UK: Once upon a Time / USA: Donkey Skin) and many excellent American productions (1968 Sweet November, Robert Ellis Miller; Ice Station Zebra, John Sturges, The Thomas Crown Affair, Norman Jewison; 1969 Castle Keep, Sydney Pollack; 1972 Potnoy's Complaint, Ernest Lehmann). He won three Oscars: one for the song "The Windmills of Your Mind" from the film The Thomas Crown Affair (Norman Jewison, 1968), the second for the score of The Summer of '42 (Robert Mulligan, 1971), and the third for the song score of Yentl (Barbra Streisand, 1983).

LELOUCH, CLAUDE (October 30, 1937, Paris, France—)

The son of a Jewish confectioner, he knew very young that cinema would be his life. His first short, Le Mal du Siècle, won a prize at the Cannes Amateur Film Festival. During his twenty-eight months of his military service, he shot documentaries for the army's Cinematographic Service. Having returned to civilian life, he directed commercials and scopitones (musical shorts). His first feature films were commercial failures. One of them remains unfinished, and he even destroyed release prints of Le Propre de l'Homme. After six years of bad luck, he suddenly won international fame thanks to Un Homme et une Femme / UK and USA: A Man and a Woman, for which he shared the Grand Prize at the Cannes Film Festival and won two Oscars (best foreign film, best original story and screenplay). He created his own production company, Les Films 13, which financed his films and many others' pictures (1968 Les Gauloises bleues, as co-producer, Michel Cournot; Benito Cereno, as co-producer, Serge Roullet, France / Spain; Sept Jours ailleurs, as co-producer, Marin Karmitz; 1969 L'Américain, as co-producer, Marcel Bozzuffi; L'Indiscret, as co-producer, François Reichenbach; 1970 Camarades, as co-producer, Marin Karmitz; Le Clair de Terre, as co-producer, Guy Gilles; Le Maître du Temps / O homem das Estrelas, as co-producer, Jean-Daniel Pollet, France / Brazil; 1971 Bonaparte et la Révolution, as producer, Abel Gance; 1972 Comme dans la Vie, short, as producer, Pierre Willemin; 1973 Far West / Le Far West, as co-producer, also actor, Jacques Brel, France / Belgium; Turkye, short, as producer, Pierre Willemin; Un Homme libre, as producer, Roberto Müller; 1978 Molière, as delegate producer, Ariane Mnouchkine; 1980 Alors, heureux?, as executive producer, Claude Barrois; 1985 Ni avec toi ni sans toi, as co-producer, Alain Maline; 1987 Cayenne Palace, as co-producer, Alain Maline; 1994 Le Voleur et la Mentreuse, as co-producer, Paul Boujenah; 2006 Nos Amis les Terriens, as producer, Bernard Werber; Entre Adultes, as co-producer, Stéphane Brizé). He appeared as himself in a few films (1987 Happy New Year, John G. Avildsen; 1995 Lumière et Compagnie / Lumiere y compania, segment directed by Sarah Moon, France / Spain; 2001 Who Is Bernard Tapie?, documentary, Marina Zenovich, USA; 2004 Epreuves d'Artistes, Samuel Faure, Gilles Jacob) and TV documentaries (1966 Cinéastes de notre Temps, documentary, episode "Et pourtant ils tournent," Claude-Jean Philippe; 1974 Histoire du Cinéma français par ceux qui l'ont fait, documentary, Armand Panigel; 1996 Belmondo le Magnifique, Patrick Chamings; 1999 Jean-Pierre Aumont, Charme et Fous-Rires, documentary, Patty Villiers; 2002 Les 13 Vies du Chat Lelouch, documentary, Isabelle Clarke; 2003 Jacques Dutronc: L'Ere de Rien, documentary, Richard Valverde; 2007 Cannes: 60 Ans d'Histoires, documentary, Gilles Nadeau; Claude Lelouch, on s'aimera, documentary, Stéphane Krausz). Autobiography: 2000 Itinéraire d'un Enfant très gâté (Robert Laffont).

LEROI, FRANCIS (September 5, 1942, Paris, France–March 21, 2002, Port Louis, Mauritius)

Having graduated with a bachelor's degree in philosophy from the Sorbonne, he was a journalist for Combat. He directed his first amateur film at age sixteen. His passion for movies led him to get in touch with some members of the New Wave. He was an assistant to Claude Chabrol (1963 Landru / USA: Bluebeard, France / Italy) and shot a documentary on the shooting of Jean-Luc Godard's Alphaville. After filming erotic features, he produced and directed many porn flicks from 1975 to his death. He also financed Un Autre Monde (Michel Baulez, unreleased), Le Franc-Tireur / Les Hasards de la Gloire (Jean-Max Causse, Roger Taverner, 1972, released in 2002), La Bonzesse (also co-director, François Jouffa, 1974), and La Soupe froide (Robert Pouret, 1975) and wrote screenplays of comic strips drawn by Georges Levis (1985 Les Perles de l'Amour, Editions Albin Michel, L'Echo des Savanes; 1987 Dodo, 13 Ans: En Présence de sa Tante seulement, Albin Michel, L'Echo des Savanes), Philippe Cavell (1986 Juliette de Sade, Editions Dominique Leroy), Romanini (1991 Dodo, la petite Pensionnaire, Albin Michel, L'Echo des Savanes), and Jean-Pierre Gibrat (1995 Pinocchio, Albin Michel, L'Echo des Savanes). LINDER, MAX (Gabriel Leuvielle / December 16, 1883, Saint-Loubes, Gironde, France–November 1, 1925, Paris, France)

The son of wine growers, he dropped out of high school to attend acting courses at the Bordeaux Conservatory and start a theatrical career. After receiving a first prize for comedy in 1902, he settled in Paris, where he frequented the “Boulevard du Crime” and the “Théâtre des Variétés,” playing small parts in melodramas. He was hired by Pathé in 1905 and made some brief film appearances before starring in Louis J. Gasnier's Première Sortie / La Première Sortie d'un Collégien. A film director since 1908, he created the comedy character of Max, who brought him international fame. Mobilized in 1914 as a driver in World War I, he spent a whole night in icy water and contracted pneumonia. Discharged and convalescent in Switzerland in 1916, he received a visit from George K. Spoor, who was looking for a new comic star to replace Charlie Chaplin (the British director and actor had left the Essanay Company to join Mutual). He signed a one-year contract—$5,000 per day against twelve movies—and moved to Chicago, where he shot his first American picture (Max Comes Across) during the winter of 1917. One film later, his poor health and some difficulties he had adapting himself to American methods of production interrupted his Hollywood career. He had to return to Europe and spent a year in a Swiss clinic recovering from double pneumonia. In 1919, he returned to the screen in his first feature-length film, Raymond Bernard's Le Petit Café. The three pictures he produced and shot in Hollywood in the early 1920s (1921 Be My Wife; Seven Years Bad Luck; 1922 The Three Must-Get-Theres) are regarded as his masterpieces and influenced the Marx Brothers and Douglas Fairbanks. In 1923, his friend Abel Gance directed him in Au Secours! (he was also the author of the original idea). The same year, he married a seventeen-year-old woman, Ninette Peters. He directed his last film in Austria in 1924. The following year, depressive despite his success, he shot himself and his wife.

LUITZ-MORAT (Maurice Radiguet / June 5, 1884, Geneva, Switzerland–August 11, 1929, Paris, France)

He gave up his studies in medicine to dedicate himself to the stage. From 1907 to 1913, he performed the classics, notably at the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre. In 1913, he married an actress, Madeleine Ramey, who introduced him to directors Louis Feuillade and Henri Fescourt. They hired him, and he played in about thirty films (from 1910 Le Secret du Corsaire rouge, Louis Feuillade, to 1927 La Petite Chocolatière, René Hervil). In 1914, he directed his first movie for Gaumont. During the shooting of La Vierge folle, he caught a cold and died at age fifty-four.

LUMIÈRE, LOUIS (October 5, 1864, Besançon, Doubs, France–June 6, 1948, Bandol, Var, France)

The son of a former sign painter turned photographer, he saved the family firm conceiving a photographic plate, “Etiquette bleue,” which brought in a lot of money. In February 1895, his brother Auguste (1862–1954) and he patented the “Cinématographe.”
The first public projection of films less than one minute long took place in the Indian Lounge of the Grand Café on December 28, 1895. The Cinématographe was an immediate success, and the Lumière brothers produced 2,113 movies, mostly documentary reports photographed by cameramen all over the world. According to the catalog that he offered to film historian Georges Sadoul, Louis Lumière himself filmed only seventeen shorts. In 1948, the creator of the Cinématographe told Sadoul that he had shot about fifty pictures (mostly before 1896). Convinced that his invention had no future, he gave up filmmaking in 1900 and stopped production in 1905. Parallel with his cinematographic activities, he patented several inventions (the "Photorama," a circular photographic plate in 1900, and autochrome plates in 1903). Until his retirement in 1920, he dedicated his time to his photographic equipment factory, the famous Usines Lumière, immortalized by one of his first movies (La Sortie des Usines Lumière).

MACHIN, ALFRED (April 20, 1877, Blendecques, Pas-de-Calais, Nord, France–June 16, 1929, Nices, Alpes-Maritimes, France)

A photographer and reporter for L'Illustration, he was sent to Africa by Pathé Frères as a cameraman and director and directed his first movies in Africa. He founded for Pathé the Hollandische Film in Amsterdam in 1911 and the Belge Film in Brussels, Belgium. He shot documentaries and comic shorts in the Netherlands, Belgium, and France. During World War I, he was mobilized and filmed for Pathé the battles of the war and life in the trenches (1915–1917). After the war, Pathé asked him to manage the two Nice-based branches of the production company, Nizza and Comica, and then offered him the purchase of the studios. He agreed and created his own society that financed the animal comedies he directed. His younger son, Claude, and wife, former Belgian actress Germaine Lécuyer, sometimes played in these pictures. Wounded by a panther on the set, he never totally recovered his health, and he died of an embolism while planning another shooting.

MAHÉ, HENRI (1907, Paris–1975, New York City, New York, USA)

After studying at the Beaux-Arts, he successively was a trainee accountant; illustrator for books, circuses, brothels, and movie theaters (he notably painted frescoes for the Parisian Le Rex in 1932); painter and decorator; and painter of frescoes for the Le Balajo dance hall, restaurants, and the great ocean liner Normandie. He entered films as a production designer for Abel Gance (1938 J'accuse / I Accuse / I Accuse (That They May Live) / That They May Live; 1939 Louise; 1940 Paradis perdu / UK: Paradise Lost / USA: Four Flights to Love; 1941 Vénus aveugle / UK and USA: Blind Venus; 1943 Le Capitaine Fracasse / La maschera sul cuore, France / Italy). He also worked as a set decorator with Jean Boyer (1941 La Romance de Paris) and André Zwobada (1942 Croisières sidérales). In 1943–1944, he directed Blondine, an experimental movie that used Simplifilm, a process he created with Achille Duhour (the built film sets were replaced with drawings and photographs inserted into the camera between the lens and the characters). The result of the experience was interesting but ended in failure. He settled in Britain, where he dedicated himself to painting (he occasionally illustrated books and did the decorations for nightclubs). His works were exhibited in many galleries all over the world. He authored a book on his friendship with writer Louis-Ferdinand Céline (1963 La Brinquebale avec Céline, La Table Ronde). He died in New York at age sixty-eight.

MALRAUX, ANDRÉ (November 3, 1901, Paris, France—November 23, 1976, Créteil, Val-de-Marne, France)

The son of a stockbroker father who committed suicide in 1930, he was raised by his mother and maternal grandmother after the separation of his parents in 1905. One of the most famous French novelists of the first half of the twentieth century (1926 La Tentation de l'Occident; 1928 Les Conquérants; 1930 La Voie royale; 1933 La Condition humaine; 1935 Le Temps du Mépris; 1937 L'Espoir; 1943 Les Noyers de l'Altenburg), he joined the Spanish Republicans during the civil war in 1937 and became colonel of the Spanish escadrille he founded. A Resistant during World War II, he was a minister of state in General de Gaulle's government (1958–1959) and then France's first minister of cultural affairs (1959–1969). He authored an autobiography in 1967 (Les Anti-mémoires, Gallimard). He appeared as himself in the documentaries El congreso internacional de los escritores en defensa de la cultura (Julio Bris, Spain) and André Malraux, la Légende du Siècle (TV, Claude Santelli).

From 1920 to 1931, he was an actor with Charles Dullin's theatrical group. After playing in a few movies (1924 Entracte, short, René Clair; 1925 Veille d'Armes, Jacques de Baroncelli; 1928 Maldone / USA: Misdeal, also location manager, Jean Grémillon), he worked as an editor (1929 Gardiens de Phare / USA: The Lighthouse Keepers, Jean Grémillon; 1930 Les Amants de Minuit, Marc Allégret, Augusto Genina; 1931 Le Blanc et le Noir, Robert Florey; L'Amour à l'Américaine / USA: American Love, Claude Heymann, Pål Fejös; Mam'zelle Nitouche, Marc Allégret; On purge Bébé, short, Jean Renoir; Le Collier, short, Marc Allégret; On opère sans Douleur, short, Jean Tarride; Les Quatre Jambes, medium-length, Marc Allégret; 1932 La Petite Chocolatière, Marc Allégret; Fanny, Marc Allégret; Seul, short, Jean Tarride; 1933 L'Agonie des Aigles / USA: The Death Agony of the Eagles, Roger Richebé; 1934 Le Voyage de Monsieur Perrichon, Jean Tarride; Minuit, Place Pigalle, Roger Richebé; 1936 Mister Flow / USA: Mr. Flow, Robert Siodmak; 1937 Un Déjeuner de Soleil, Marcel Cravenne; L'Habit vert, Roger Richebé) and production manager (1935 Koenigsmark / USA: Crimson Dynasty, Maurice Tourneur; 1939 Dédé la Musique, André Berthomieu). Overwhelmed by the rout of 1940, he became a convinced Petainist and published articles in collaborationist newspapers under the pseudonym of Paul Riche. He notably was chief editor of L'Appel. A former Freemason, he directed the antimasonic medium-length Forces occultes, in which he denounced the ascendancy of Freemasonry over French society and its supposed responsibility in the defeat. In August 1944, his mother was arrested by the FFI (French Resistance), and he gave himself up. He had to wait for four years to be judged and then sentenced to death. He was shot in March 1949. A playwright, he also authored poems in jail that were collected by his son and published in Swiss in 1963 (Les Barreaux d'Or).

MÉLIÈS, GEORGES (Marie Georges Jean Méliès / December 8, 1861, Paris, France–January 21, 1938, Paris)

The son of a wealthy footwear manufacturer, he enrolled in the Ecole des Beaux-Arts in Paris and completed his studies of art in London, where he also became involved in conjuring. Having returned to Paris, he briefly worked with his father but spent most of his time creating automatons. He earned a living as a caricaturist under the pseudonym of Geo Smile. In 1888, he bought back the Robert Houdin Theatre, where he gave performances as an illusionist (Cendrillon; La Poudre de Perlimpimpin; Michel Strogoff; Les Pilules du Diable; Le Tour du Monde en 80 Jours; Robinson Crusoe; Les Mille et une Nuits). In December 1895, he was at one of the first showings of the Lumière Cinématographe at the Grand Café and offered 100,000 francs to Louis Lumière in return for the projector / camera. Unfortunately, Lumière declined his proposal. Thanks to British film pioneer Robert William Paul, he managed to get a Bioscop projector. Then he founded his production company, Star Film. In 1897, he built the first French studio in Montreuil. For a dozen years, he was a successful producer and director, but the evolution of the cinematographic business was unfavorable to him, and after several commercial failures, he went bankrupt. In 1926, he married the star of several of his films, Jeanne d'Alcy (1865–1956), who ran a toy store at the Montparnasse railway station. In the late 1920s, journalists and film historians brought him and his work out of oblivion. In 1931, Louis Lumière presented him the Legion of Honor Medal. His autobiography, Mes Mémoires, written in 1937, was published first in the Italian review Cinema and then in French as an annex to the book Georges Méliès, Mage (Maurice Bessy, Lo Duca, Editions Prisma, Paris, 1945). He appeared in Jacques-Bernard Brunius's short Violon d'Ingres (1939). In 1988, several of his movies were remade and gathered under the title Méliès 88 (shorts, episode "Rêve d'Artiste," Pierre Etaix; Les Sept Péchés capitaux, Philippe Gautier; Le Topologue, Marc Caro; Le Rêve du Radja, Jean-Louis Bertucelli; Le Duel, Zbigniew Rybczynski; Le Cauchemar d'un Inventeur, Maurizio Nichetti; Gulliver, Jean-Pierre Mocky).

MELVILLE, JEAN-PIERRE (Jean-Pierre Grumbach / October 20, 1917, Paris, France–August 2, 1973, Paris, France)

The son of a wholesale merchant, he filmed his first movies with a Pathé Baby camera when he was still a child. He began doing his military service in 1937 but was still in uniform when World War II broke out. In 1940, he was evacuated to England from Dunkirk. He asked to be assigned to the French Free Forces and took part in the African and Italian campaigns and the Provence landing in August 1944. He vainly tried to obtain the trainee assistant director card and decided to become his own producer. Thanks to the money he won with his first directing effort, the short Vingt-Quatre Heures de la Vie d'un Clown, he financed a personal project (Le Silence de la Mer). The huge commercial success of Quand tu liras cette Lettre allowed him to buy the Jenner studios, which unfortunately were destroyed by fire in 1967 with all the director's archives. His pseudonym is a tribute to one of his favorite writers, Herman Melville. He played small parts in several films (1948 Les Drames du Bois de Boulogne, short, Jacques Loew; 1950 Orphée / USA: Orpheus, Jean Cocteau; 1957 Un Amour de Poche / UK: Nude in His Pocket / USA: Girl in His Pocket, Pierre Kast; 1960 A Bout de Souffle / UK: By a Tether / UK and USA: Breathless, Jean-Luc Godard; 1962 Le Signe du Lion / UK and USA: The Sign of Leo, Eric Rohmer, shot in 1959; 1963 Landru / Landrù / USA: Bluebeard, Claude Chabrol, France / Italy). He died of a heart attack at age fifty-five. In 2002, Neil Jordan filmed a remake of his movie Bob le Flambeur (2002 The Good Thief / L'Homme de la Riviera / Le Dernier Coup de Mr. Bob, Neil Jordan, USA / France / UK / Canada).

MEYER, JEAN (January 14, 1914, Paris, France–January 8, 2003, Paris, France)

The son of a baker, he had to earn his living as a bank clerk at age seventeen. In 1932, he joined the Paris Conservatory and made his theatrical debut as an actor the next year. A pupil of Louis Jouvet, he entered the Comédie-Française in 1938 and turned a stage director in 1941. He played supporting roles in eighteen movies (from 1941 Ne bougez plus, Pierre Caron, to 1964 Le Corniaud / Colpo grosso ma non troppo / UK and USA: The Sucker, Gérard Oury, France / Italy). After performing 300 plays at the Comédie Française, he left the prestigious “Molière’s House” to run several Parisian theaters (Théâtre du Palais-Royal in 1960, Théâtre Michel in 1964) and then the Théâtre des Célestins in Lyon. He taught acting at the Paris Conservatory and was artistic director of the ENSATT (the Rue Blanche school). Also a playwright (1962 Micmac; 1963 L'Âge idiot; 1965 Le Vice dans la Peau), he directed the two first movies of the Comédie Française.

MOCKY, JEAN-PIERRE (Jean-Paul Adam Mokiejewski / July 6, 1929, Nice, Alpes-Maritimes, France—)

The son of a Polish officer of Chechen origin father and a Polish mother, he entered films at age thirteen as an extra in Marcel Carné's Les Visiteurs du Soir / USA: The Devil's Envoys (1942). After playing small parts in Vive la Liberté! / On a tué un Homme (Jeff Musso, 1946), L'Homme au Chapeau rond / USA: The Eternal Husband (Pierre Billon, 1946), L'Affaire du Collier de la Reine / USA: Queen's Necklace (Marcel l'Herbier, Jean Dréville), Rêves d'Amour / USA: Dreams of Love (Christian Stengel), and La Cabane aux Souvenirs (Jean Stelli), he briefly studied law at the University of Strasbourg. Having trained at the Paris Conservatory with Henri Rollan and Louis Jouvet as teachers, he opted for an acting career. He played in about seventy movies, including Le Paradis des Pilotes perdus / USA: The Hell of Lost Pilots (Jean Delannoy, 1949), Orphée / USA: Orpheus (Jean Cocteau), I vinti / Les Vaincus / UK: The Vanquished / USA: Youth and Perversion (segment “Sans Amour;” Michelangelo Antonioni, Italy / France, 1953), Graziella (Giorgio Bianchi, Italy), Senso / USA: Livia / US TV: The Wanton Contessa (also assistant director, Luchino Visconti, Italy / France), Gli sbandati (Francesco Maselli, Italy), Le Comte de Monte-Cristo / Il tesoro di Montecristo / USA: The Count of Monte Cristo (two episodes: “La Trahison;” “La Vengeance;” Robert Vernay, France / Italy, 1955, shot in 1953–1954), and La Tête contre les Murs / UK: The Keepers / USA: Head Against the Wall (Georges Franju, 1959). Since 1959, he has been one of the most prolific French directors and directed movies impregnated with his taste for satire, caricature, and the fantastic. He authored two autobiographies (2001 M le Mocky, Editions Denoël; 2006 Cette Foi je flingue, Editions Florent Massot) and two novels (2005 Mister Flash: Gentleman Gangster, Editions Flammarion; 2007 Les Vacances du Pouvoir, Editions Michalon).

MUSIDORA (Jeanne Roques / February 23, 1889, Paris, France–December 7, 1957, Paris, France)

She borrowed her pseudonym from Théophile Gautier's novel Fortunio. A former dancer, she notably played in a revue, Ca grise, with future writer Colette. She entered films in 1909 performing in Le Troisième Larron. Her portrayals of such mysterious characters as Irma Vep and the adventuress Diana Monti in Louis Feuillade's serials Les Vampires (1915–1916) and Judex (1916), respectively, earned her international fame and the admiration of poets and writers (Louis Aragon called her the "tenth muse" in an article published in 1918 and co-authored with André Breton a play for her, Le Trésor des Jésuites). After starring in about fifty movies, including those she directed, she retired in 1926 and made a last film appearance in a documentary she filmed (1951 La Magique Image). Dedicating the last years of her life to the Cinémathèque Française, she authored many articles on films in the magazines Comoedia, L'Eclaireur, Masques et Visages, and Fantasio; an autobiography (La Vie d'une Vamp); two novels (1934 Paroxysmes: De l'Amour à la mort; En Amour tout est possible); a collection of poems (1939 Auréoles: Poésies scandées); and a play (1946 La Vie sentimentale de George Sand).

OPHÜLS, MAX (Max Oppenheimer / May 6, 1902, Saarbrücken, Germany—March 25, 1957, Hamburg, Germany)

His rich German-Jewish parents had made their fortune in the garment business. At the age of seventeen, following a brief experience in journalism, he began a career as a stage actor. In 1923, he started directing plays (about 200 until the early 1930s) and soon won great fame in all German-speaking countries. At age twenty-four, he was working at the prestigious Burgtheater in Vienna, but after being an assistant and dialogue director for Anatole Litvak (1930 No wieder Liebe / USA: No More Love), he gave up the boards to direct films. In France from 1933, he had to take refuge in the USA during the occupation of France. Going back to France after the liberation, he still directed four masterpieces before dying of a heart attack at age fifty-four. He was on the point of directing a new picture, Montparnasse 19 / Gli amori di Montparnasse / UK: The Lovers of Montparnasse / USA: Modigliani of Montparnasse. Jacques Becker, who finally shot the film, dedicated it to his memory. In 1957, a few weeks before his death, he directed onstage a Baumarchais play (La Folle Journée ou Le Mariage de Figaro). He shot a few scenes of Marcel L'Herbier's Le Scandale (1934). German director Martina Müller filmed a documentary on him (1990 Max Ophüls—Den Schönen guten waren; Germany).

ORMESSON, ANTOINE D' (November 3, 1924, Paris, France—)

A music lover from his early childhood, he wrote a piano and orchestra concerto at age seventeen (turned into a violoncello and orchestra concerto, it was created at the Théâtre du Châtelet, in 1969). In 1942, while his father, politician and novelist Wladimir d'Ormesson, was chased by the Gestapo, he fled to Switzerland. Educated at Geneva and the Lausanne Conservatories of Music (1943–1944), he joined the First French Army, commanded by General de Lattre de Tassigny. After taking part in the Rhône, Vosges, and Alsace campaigns, he followed his father to Argentina (1945), where he completed his musical studies with Juan Bautista, a disciple of Manuel de Falla. He returned to France in 1948 and worked music for eight years, earning a living working for an electronics industry company (La Radio-Industrie). In 1957, he created a film production company, Sumer, and directed two shorts and six feature films. He is still a composer.

Oury, Gérard (Max-Gérard Houry Tannenbaum / April 29, 1919, Paris, France–July 19, 2006, Saint-Tropez, Var, France)

The son of a classical violinist father and a journalist mother who had many artist friends (painter Foujita drew her portrait), he was educated at Janson de Sailly High School. He wanted to be a journalist first but soon switched to acting. At age seventeen, he enrolled in the Cours Simon and two years later in the National Conservatory of Dramatic Arts. He made his debut at the Comédie-Française in Britannicus. During the occupation of France, he fled the country and settled in Geneva. Back in his native country after the liberation, he landed a small part in Jacques Becker's Antoine et Antoinette / UK and USA: Antoine and Antoinette (1947). From 1947 to 1963, he played supporting roles in more than twenty pictures. He notably performed Napoléon Bonaparte twice in films (1953 Sea Devils, Raoul Walsh, USA; 1954 L'amante di Paride / UK: The Face That Launched a Thousand Ships / USA: Love of the Three Queens, Marc Allégret, Italy) and co-starred with Yul Brynner and Ingrid Bergman in Anatole Litvak's The Journey (USA, 1959) and with Paul Newman and Edward G. Robinson in Mark Robson's The Prize (USA, 1963). A film director since 1959, he shot the greatest box office hits of French cinema. After authoring two autobiographical books (1988 Mémoire d'Éléphant, Olivier Orban; 2001 Ma Grande Vadrouille, Plon), he made his last film appearance in Là-haut, un Roi au Dessus des Nuages / Là-haut (Pierre Schoendoerffer, 2003, shot in 2001). In 1977, he directed onstage the only play he wrote (Arrête ton Cinéma). His daughter, Danièle Thompson, is a screenwriter and film director.

ROBERT, YVES (June 19, 1920, Saumur, Maine-et-Loire, France–May 10, 2002, Paris, France)

He started working at age thirteen as an apprentice pastry cook, messenger, unskilled road worker, and typographer. In 1942, he joined the Grenier-Hussenot theatrical company in Lyon and then attended Jean-Marie Conty's acting class in Paris. While directing several shows in the famous Parisian cabaret that he managed from 1948 to 1952, La Rose Rouge, he got his first role in a film (a soccer player in Les Dieux du Dimanche, René Lucot) in 1948. A gifted comedy director since 1953, he never stopped acting and played mostly supporting roles in about seventy films. He probably gave his best acting performance as Patrick Dewaere's father in Claude Sautet's Un Mauvais Fils / UK and USA: A Bad Son in 1980. Autobiography: 1996 Un Homme de Joie: Dialogue avec Jérôme Tonnerre (Flammarion). In 1956, he had married actress Danièle Delorme (b. 1926), with whom he co-founded a production company, Les Films de la Guéville, in 1961. Their first production, La Guerre des Boutons / USA: War of the Buttons, received the Jean Vigo Prize. In the 1970s and early 1980s, Les Films de la Guéville released in France all the Monthly Python movies.

ROCHEFORT, CHARLES DE (Charles d'Authier de Rochefort / July 7, 1879, Port-Vendres, Pyrénées-Orientales, France–February 2, 1952, Paris, France)

A former insurance agent, he turned an actor and played onstage and in music halls and cabarets before entering films as an extra and stuntman in 1906. After notably being Max Linder's stand-in, he started an acting career that led him to Hollywood, where he co-starred as Charles De Roche in some prestigious Paramount productions, including The Ten Commandments (Cecil B. DeMille, 1923) and The Cheat (George Fitzmaurice, 1923). Unfortunately, talkies stopped his professional rise. He went to Canada and came back to the music hall for a few years before returning to France, where he was reborn as a film director.

ROLLIN, JEAN (Jean Michel Rollin Roth le Gentil / November 3, 1938, Neuilly-sur-Seine, Hauts-de-Seine, France—)

He entered films in 1955 and collaborated in the creation of animated films. Earning his living as a TV editor and assistant director (1962 Un Cheval pour Deux, Roger Pierre, Jean-Marc Thibault), he filmed his first short in 1958. In 1962, he created a production company, Les Films ABC, to finance an unfinished feature-length film (L'itinéraire marin). By 1967, he started producing (in partnership with American

Sam Selsky) and directing horror movies. He still remains the only French director specializing in that genre. He wrote a study on Gaston Leroux that was published in issues 23 and 24 of the famous review Midi Minuit Fantastique (1970). He also played small parts in films (1956 Crime et Châtiment / UK: The Most Dangerous Sin / USA: Crime and Punishment, Georges Lampin; 1973 Le Sourire vertical, Robert Lapoujade; 1985 Sanguine, short, Pierre Pattin; 1992 Trepanator, shot on video, Norbert G. His father was a writer and his mother the daughter of Frank Higgins, a New York State governor. In France since 1947, he moved to Paris to study music before enrolling in the Ecole of Art Décoratifs. At age nineteen, he went to New York, where he dedicated himself to his passion, jazz music, and met Count Basie, Thelonious Monk, and stand-up comedian Lenny Bruce. Having returned to France, he created a theatrical company, La Compagnie Jérôme Savary, and co-founded Le Grand Théâtre Panique with Arrabal and Copi. In 1968, he formed a new troupe that soon became famous, Le Grand Magic Circus et ses Animaux tristes. After the dissolution of the group, he directed many plays and operas, wrote the music for two films (1972 Ca va, ça vient, Pierre Barouh; 1973 La Vie facile, also co-screenwriter, actor, Francis Warin, shot in 1971), and managed several theaters. He authored the following books: 1974 Le Grand Magic Circus et ses Animaux tristes (Editions Belfond); 1985 La Vie privée d'un Magicien ordinaire (Editions Ramsay); 1991 Ma Vie commence à 20h30 (Editions Stock); Marilyn Montreuil (novel, Editions de l'Archipel); 1996 Jérôme Savary, un Enfant dans la Tête (by Colette Godard, Editions du Rocher); Magic Circus, 1966–1996, 30 Ans d'Aventures et d'Amour (Editions Bernard Chevry); 2000 Habana Blues (novel, Editions Grasset); 2004 Dictionnaire amoureux du Spectacle (Editions Plon).

TCHERNIA, PIERRE (Pierre Tcherniakowski / January 29, 1928, Paris, France–)

A movie buff since his childhood, he studied at the Vaugirard cinema school (1945) and spent one year at the IDHEC (1946). Unfortunately, cinema at the time seemed an impregnable fortress, and he did not find any job in movies. In 1947, he joined French radio (Radio-Diffusion Française) and its Club d'Essai, a group of young writers and actors who created radio plays, managed by poet Jean Tardieu. A French TV pioneer, he co-founded TV news and was a newsreader for six years (1949–1955) while directing his first TV programs (1952–1953 La Classe en Images; Le Magazine des Explorateurs; Le Club des Inventeurs). From 1955 to the early 1960s, he became a famous reporter, notably for Cinq Colonnes à la Une. His professionalism and amiable nature earned him huge popularity. He hosted and sometimes produced some of the most successful French programs (1955–1960 La Boîte à Sel; 1958–1959 La Clé des Champs; 1961–1978 L'Ami public No. 1; 1966–1967 7ème Art–7ème Case; 1967–1972 Monsieur Cinéma; 1972–1974 Le Dernier des Cinq; 1975–1977 Monsieur Cinéma; 1977 Ces Messieurs nous disent; 1978–1980 Monsieur Cinéma; 1980–1981 Jeudi Cinéma; 1982–1988 Mardi Cinéma). The first film he directed alone (Le Viager) was a box office hit. He played supporting roles and small parts in several movies (1953 Les Quatre Mousquetaires, medium-length, as Pierre de Rochefort, Gilles Margaritis; 1960 La Brune que voilà, Robert Lamoureux; 1962 Un Cheval pour Deux, Jean-Marc Thibault; La Guerre des Boutons / USA: War of the Buttons, Yves Robert; 1963 Carambolages, also co-screenwriter, co-adapter, Marcel Bluwal; 1965 Pleins Feux sur Stanislas / Rendezvous der Killer / USA: Killer Spy, Jean-Charles Dudrumet; 1966 L'Anglais tel qu'on le parle, short, Marcel Cravenne; 1967 Le Petit Baigneur / Si salvo chi puo, also co-screenwriter, Robert Dhéry; La Bonne Peinture, TV, Philippe Agostini; 1974 La Gueule de l'Emploi, Jacques Rouland; 1981 Signé Furax, Marc Simenon; 1985 Les Rois du Gag, Claude Zidi; 1988 L'Enfance de l'Art, Francis Girod; La Table tournante, animation, voice, Paul Grimault). He collaborated as a co-screenwriter on several Astérix and Lucky Luke cartoons (1967 Astérix et Cléopâtre / UK: Asterix and Cleopatra, René Goscinny, France / Belgium; 1971 Daisy Town, René Goscinny, France / Belgium; 1976 Les Douze Travaux d'Astérix, René Goscinny and Albert Uderzo; 1978 La Ballade des Dalton, René Goscinny, Henri Gruel, and Morris; 1985 Astérix et la Surprise de César / USA: Asterix Versus Caesar, Gaëtan and Paul Brizzi) and several comedies (1963 La Foire aux Cancre, Louis Daquin; 1969 Trois Hommes sur un Cheval, Marcel Moussy). He authored two autobiographies: Mon Petit Bonhomme de Chemin—Souvenirs provisoires (Editions Stock, 1975) and Magic Ciné (Librairie Arthème-Fayard, 2005).

TOURNEUR, JACQUES (Jacques Thomas / November 12, 1904, Paris, France–December 19, 1997, Bergerac, Dordogne, France)

The son of director Maurice Tourneur and actress Fernande Van Doren (1877–1964), he followed his father to the USA in 1913 and became a US citizen in 1919. He grew up in Hollywood, where he landed a job as an office boy at MGM in 1924. After working as a script clerk, assistant director, actor, and location manager on several productions, including the six last American films directed by Maurice Tourneur, he signed a contract with MGM as a stock actor in 1926 and notably appeared in Love (Edmund Goulding, 1927) and The Trail of 98 (Clarence Brown, 1928). In 1928, he returned to France and became his father's editor and assistant until 1934. The young Jean Gabin starred and sang in the first movie he directed (Tout ça ne vaut pas l'Amour). After his fourth French film, he joined Hollywood and MGM in 1935, working first as a second unit director (The Winning Ticket, Charles Reisner; 1935 A Tale of Two Cities). Having settled in Hollywood until the mid-1960s, he directed only American films from 1936 to 1965. He was also an assistant director to George W. Hill (1927 Tell the Marines, USA), Jacques Natanson (1933 La Fusée / USA: Grandeur and Decadence), and W. S. Van Dyke (1938 Marie Antoinette, USA).

TOURNEUR, MAURICE (Maurice Félix Thomas / February 2, 1873, Paris, France–August 4, 1961, Paris, France)

The son of a jewel merchant, he studied at the Beaux-Arts and earned a living as a decorator and book illustrator before working as an assistant at the ateliers of sculptor Auguste Rodin and painter Puvis de Chavannes. In 1900, he made his acting debut onstage with the Réjane and Antoine troupes. A dozen years later, he joined the Éclair film company and entered films as an assistant director (1912 Conscience d'Enfant, Emile Chautard; 1913 Mathilde, Emile Chautard) and actor (1912 Max Boxeur par Amour / Boxeur par Amour / UK: Love and Boxing, Max Linder). Thanks to his superb command of English, he was sent to Fort Lee, New Jersey, where he directed many American productions of Éclair. After filming movies for US studios (World, Paragon, Equitable, Paramount), he returned to France in the late 1920s and shot about twenty-five films until 1948. A car accident and the loss of one leg put an end to his career. He spent the last years of his life translating

English and American detective novels into French. His son was director Jacques Tourneur.

TRINTIGNANT, JEAN-LOUIS (December 11, 1930, Piolenc, Vaucluse, France–)

The son of a manufacturer, he loved poetry since his childhood. He briefly studied law in Aix-en-Provence. After seeing Charles Dullin in L'Avare in December 1949, he decided to become an actor. Having arrived in Paris in 1950, he attended acting courses with Tania Balachova. He made his stage debut in A chacun selon sa Faim, a play by Jean Mogin, directed by Raymond Hermantier (1951), and entered films, appearing in a short (1955 Péchiney, Marcel Ichac) and playing a supporting role in Si tout les Gars du Monde . . . / S.O.S. Lutezia / UK: Race for Life / USA: If All the Guys in the World . . . (Christian-Jaque, France / Italy). His performance in Et Dieu . . . créa la Femme / E Dio creo la donna / Piace a troppi / UK: And Woman . . . Was Created / USA: . . . And God Created Woman (Roger Vadim, France / Italy) and his love story with the star of the movie, Brigitte Bardot, made him famous. He soon became one of the finest and most praised French leading actors. Among the 130 films in which he starred or co-starred, several were international successes: Il sorpasso / Le Fanfaron / USA: The Easy Life (Dino Risi, Italy / France, 1962); Un Homme et une Femme / UK and USA: A Man and a Woman (Claude Lelouch, 1966); Z (Costa-Gavras, France / Algeria, 1969); Ma Nuit chez Maud / UK: My Night with Maud / USA: My Night at Maud's (Eric Rohmer, 1969); Il conformista / Le Conformiste / Der Konformist / Der grosse Intum / UK and USA: The Conformist (Bernardo Bertolucci, Italy / France / West Germany, 1970). Often approached by American directors (including Francis Ford Coppola and Steven Spielberg), he declined most of their offers, but he worked with Frank Borzage and Edgar G. Ulmer (1961 L'Atlantide / Antinea, l'amante della città sepolta / USA: Journey Beneath the Desert / Siren of Atlantis, France / Italy) and played a supporting role in Under Fire (Roger Spottiswoode, 1983). He directed two unconventional comedies that failed at the box office, but the first one was a masterpiece of black humor. He was formerly married to actress Stéphane Audran and directress Nadine Trintignant (1961–1976). His daughter was actress Marie Trintignant (1962–2003).

Filmography

- 1973 Une Journée bien remplie / Una giornata spesa bene / Una giornata spesa bene ovvero nove strani omicidi commessi in una sola giornata da uno che non è il mestiere (also co-screenwriter, co-dialogist, voice; France / Italy)

TRINTIGNANT, NADINE (Lucienne Marquand / November 11, 1934, Nice, Alpes-Maritimes, France–)

The daughter of publisher Jean Marquand, she left her family at age seventeen to become a film editor. In 1952, she began working as a lab assistant before working as an assistant editor, notably to Jules Dassin (1955 Du Rififi chez les Hommes / UK and USA: Rififi, France / Italy) and Michel Boisrond (1957 Une Parisienne / Una Parigina / USA: La Parisienne, France / Italy). Her credits as editor include the following: 1960 L'Eau à la bouche / UK and USA: A Game for Six Lovers (Jacques Doniol-Valcroze); 1961 Léon Morin, Prêtre / Leon morin prete / UK: Leon Morin, Priest / USA: The Forgiven Sinner (Jean-Pierre Melville, France / Italy); 1963 Les Grands Chemins / Il baro / UK and USA: Of Flesh and Blood (Christian Marquand, France / Italy); Le Petit Soldat / UK and USA: The Little Soldier (Jean Luc Godard); 1964 La Bataille de France (documentary, Jean Aurel). Her first directing effort was a short. Formerly married to actor and director Jean-Louis Trintignant (b. 1930), they had two daughters, actress Marie Trintignant (1962–2003) and Pauline (who died as a baby in 1969), and a son, Vincent (b. 1973). Her brothers were actors Christian (1927–2000) and Serge (1930–2004) Marquand. She wrote novels (1997 Ton Chapeau au Vestiaire, Editions Fayard; 2002 Le Jeune Homme de la Rue de France, Fayard), short stories (2007 Une Etrange Peine, Editions Fayard), and several books on her deceased daughter (2003 Ma Fille, Marie, Editions Fayard; Marie Trintignant, Editions Fayard).

TRUFFAUT, FRANÇOIS (February 6, 1932, Paris, France—October 21, 1984, Neuilly-sur-Seine, France)

The son of a Jewish dentist father whom he never met and a secretary mother, he was accepted as an adopted son by his stepfather, Roland Truffaut, who gave him his name. Raised mainly by his grandmother until her death in 1942, he had a chaotic childhood and spent some time in a reformatory after dropping out of school at age fourteen. In 1948, he created his own cine-club. His love for movies and the precious advice of his spiritual father, film critic and theoretician

André Bazin, led him to journalism. In 1950, he published his first criticism in Elle, Le Bulletin du Ciné-Club, and La Gazette du Cinéma (managed by Eric Rohmer) before collaborating on Arts and Les Cahiers du Cinéma (1953). A great denigrator of French academic cinema (the New Wave directors called it the French Quality cinema), he was one of the most severe and detested critics of his generation. He directed his first short, Une Visite (edited by Alain Resnais), in 1955. Author of the original story of A Bout de Souffle / UK: By a Tether / UK and USA: Breathless (Jean-Luc Godard), he collaborated as a screenwriter on several movies (1958 Les Surmenés, short, as co-screenwriter, co-dialogist, Jacques Doniol-Valcroze; 1960 Me faire ça à moi / USA: It Means That Much to Me, as uncredited co-screenwriter, Pierre Grimblat; 1964 Mata-Hari / Mata-Hari, agente segreto H 21, as co-screenwriter, co-adapter, dialogist, also co-producer, Jean-Louis Richard, France / Italy). In 1957, he created his production company, Les Films du Carosse (a tribute to Jean Renoir), and besides his own movies, he produced or co-produced a handful of films (1958 Anna la Bonne, short, Claude Jutra, Belgium; 1960 Paris nous appartient / UK: Paris Is Ours / USA: Paris Belongs to Us, Jacques Rivette, shot in 1958; Le Testament d'Orphée ou Ne me demandez pas pourquoi / Le Testament d'Orphée / USA: The Testament of Orpheus, as assistant producer, Jean Cocteau; 1961 Le Scarabée d'Or, short, Robert Lachenay; 1967 Deux ou Trois Choses que je sais d'elle / UK and USA: Two or Three Things I Know About Her, Jean-Luc Godard; 1968 L'Enfance nue / UK: Me / USA: Naked Childhood, Maurice Pialat; 1970 La Faute de l'Abbé Mouret / UK: The Sin of Father Mouret / USA: The Demise of Father Mouret, Georges Franju; 1976 Les Lolos de Lola, Bernard Dubois; 1987 Yeelen / La Lumière / Das Licht / Brightness, Souleymane Cissé, France / West Germany / Burkina Faso / Mali). An actor in several of his films, he also played in Le Coup du Berger / USA: Fool's Mate (short, Jacques Rivette, 1956) and Close Encounters of the Third Kind (Steven Spielberg, USA). In 1983, Blake Edwards shot a US version of L'Homme qui aimait les Femmes (The Man Who Loved Women). After his death, Claude Miller (1988 La Petite Voleuse / USA: The Little Thief) and Gavin Millar (1995 Belle Époque, TV miniseries) adapted two of his unfilmed screenplays. In 1962, he interviewed Alfred Hitchcock during the shooting of The Birds. A book (the "Hitchbook" Le Cinéma selon Hitchcock, Robert Laffont, 1966, then Gallimard, 1983, English translation first published by Simon and Schuster in 1967) was born from their meeting. He also gathered some

VARÉLA, JOSÉ (July 29, 1933, Paris, France—)

The son of a Parisian mother and a Spanish father, he was raised by an American. He grew up in Grenoble, where he became a movie buff. Educated at the Polytechnic Institute of Lausanne, he intended to become an architect engineer but instead took acting courses at the Charles Dullin School. Spotted by stage director Antoine Bourseiller, he worked for four years with Peter Brook (he notably performed Rodolfo in Arthur Miller's A View from the Bridge, in 1957) and played Mick in Harold Pinter's The Caretaker (directed by Roger Blin, 1961). Seen in several films (1958 Liberté surveillée, Henri Aisner, Vladimir Vleck, France / Czechoslovakia; L'Opéra Mouffe, short, Agnès Varda; 1960 Le Huitième Jour, Marcel Hanoun; 1962 Le Signe du Lion / UK and USA: The Sign of Leo, Eric Rohmer, shot in 1959; 1965 Béatrice, Jean-Roger Richter, France / Romania; 1967 Lettre à Carla / Brief a Carla, Jean-José Richter, France / Bulgaria; 1968 Les Gauloises bleues, Michel Cournot; 1977 Ben et Benedict, Paula Delsol) and TV movies (1965 Evariste Gallois, Alexandre Astruc; 1966 Les Compagnons de Jésus, 6 × 52', Michel Drach, 1981 L'Étouffe Grand-Mère, Jean-Pierre Bastid; 1994 Une qui promet, Marianne Lamour), he also worked as a production assistant (1965 Paris vu par... / UK and USA: Six in Paris, Jean-Daniel Pollet, Jean Rouch, Jean Douchet, Eric Rohmer, Jean-Luc Godard, Claude Chabrol), editor (1975 La Route, Jean-François Bizot, shot in 1972), and co-screenwriter (1983 Cap Canaille, Juliet Berto, Jean-Henri Roger). He authored several novels (1980 Drick, Engrenages, republished by Marabout in 1986; 1985 Phil Meteor, Editions Jean-Claude Lattès; 1996 Rivière salée, Fleuve Noir) and wrote articles for Libération and Paris-Hebdo (1979–1980). VAUTIER, RENÉ (January 15, 1928, Camaret-sur-Mer, Finistère, France–)

Decorated with the Croix de Guerre (Cross of War) at age sixteen for his acts of resistance, he graduated from the IDHEC in 1946. A politically involved director, he directed his first documentary during the Algerian War. Showing the point of view of Arab fighters, he was arrested by the French and spent twenty-five months in a Tunisian jail. In 1960–1961, he contributed to the structure of Algerian and Tunisian cinematographies. He stayed in Algeria after independence and wrote the screenplay of Ahmed Rachedi's L'Aube des Damnés / Fajr Al-Mu'azabine (1966, shot in 1964). Returning to France and more especially to his native Brittany, he created in 1970 l'U.P.C.B. (Unité de Production Cinéma Bretagne). He was a technical adviser to Serge Poljinsky (1974 Le Funambule). Other credits (as actor): 1992 Cinématon (documentary, short, as himself, Gérard Courant); 1994 Les Mots perdus (Marcel Simard, Canada); 1998 Electrons libres (short, Jean-Marc Moutout); 2001 La Mémoire des Pierres (short, Corto Fajal).

VEBER, FRANCIS (July 28, 1937, Neuilly-sur-Seine, Hauts-de-Seine, France—)

He was born into a family that had seven writers among his members. Tristan Bernard was his great-uncle; his grandfather, Pierre Veber, was a journalist and screenwriter (he authored the novel Fanfan la Tulipe); his father was a literary director for an avant-garde review; and his mother wrote sentimental novels under the pseudonym of Georgette Paul. After completing his secondary studies at Claude Bernard High School, he successively spent four years in the faculty of medicine and two years in the faculty of law. He finally became a journalist and reporter for three years at Radio Luxembourg, for which he also wrote a radiophonic play (Deux plus un). Gifted for writing, he published many works in the magazines Lui, Adam, and Marie-France. In 1967, he authored his first play, L'Enlèvement, which led him to screenwriting (he adapted it as Appelez-moi Mathilde, directed by Pierre Mondy in 1969). From 1972 to 1998, he wrote or co-wrote about twenty screenplays and dialogues, notably for Georges Lautner (1971 Il était une Fois un Flic / C'era una volta un commissario / UK: Flic Story, France / Italy; 1973 La Valise / UK: The Girl in the Trunk / USA: Man in the Trunk; 1976 On aura tout vu / USA: The Bottom Line), Yves Robert (1972 Le Grand Blond avec une Chaussure noire / UK: Follow That Guy with the One Black Shoe; 1974 Le Retour du grand Blond / USA: The Return of the Tall Blond Man with One Black shoe), Edouard Molinaro (1973 L'Emmerdeur / Il rompiballe / UK: A Pain in the A . . ., also author of original play; 1975 Le Téléphone rose / UK and USA: The Pink Telephone), Philippe de Broca (1973 Le Magnifique / Come si distrugge la riputazione del più grande agente segreto del mondo / UK: How to Destroy the Reputation of the Greatest Secret Agent / USA: The Magnificent One, France / Italy), Henri Verneuil (1975 Peur sur la Ville / Il poliziotto della brigata criminale / UK: The Night Caller / USA: Fear over the City, France / Italy), Pierre Granier-Deferre (1975 Adieu poulet / USA: The French Detective), and Jean-Jacques Annaud (1979 Coup de Tête / UK and USA: Hothead). He also wrote an American comedy, Partners (James Burrows). Several US remakes were adapted from his original screenplays (1981 Buddy Buddy, Billy Wilder; 1982 The Toy, Richard Donner; 1985 The Man with One Red Shoe, Stan Dragoti; 1991 Pure Luck, also executive producer, Nadia Tass; 1996 The Birdcage / Birds of a Feather, Mike Nichols; 1997 Father's Day, also executive producer, Ivan Reitman). He produced the following movies: 1990 Tom et Lola, Bertrand Arthuys; 1993 Cuisines et Dépendances, Philippe Muyl; 1996 Les Victimes, Patrick Grandperret.

VEBER, JEAN (July 3, 1965, Neuilly-sur-Seine, Hauts-de-Seine, France—)

The son of screenwriter, playwright, and director Francis Veber, he was educated at Santa Monica College, California (cinema department). Having returned to France, he worked as an assistant to talent agents (Armedia, 1986–1987) and was briefly a journalist for Studio Magazine (January–July 1988). Then he entered films as a production trainee in various film companies (Gaumont, Parafrance Films, Films Ariane). In 1994, he joined the Walt Disney Company in Burbank, California, as a production assistant. He was also a trainee assistant director (1981 La Chèvre / UK and USA: The Goat, Francis Veber, France / Mexico), actor (1986 Les Fugitifs, Francis Veber), assistant director to Sam Raimi (1992 Army of Darkness, USA), and co-screenwriter (1993 Le Syndrome de Gilles de la Tourette, short, Philippe Azoulay; 1994 Cache Cash, Claude Pinoteau).

VECCHIALI, PAUL (April 28, 1930, Ajaccio, Corsica, France—)

A movie buff since his childhood, he always intended to make films (he remains a great admirer of French cinema of the 1930s and 1940s). At age eighteen, he spent much time watching actors and technicians working in the Studios de la Victorine in Nice. Having graduated from Polytechnic School in 1953, he had to wait until 1961 to make his film debut. Unfortunately, the 16-mm silent movie he shot was never released. He created a production company, Les Roses de Gion, to finance a short. Seen as an actor in a few films (1963 Désormais, short, Daniel Epstein; 1965 Le Bonheur / UK and USA: Happiness, Agnès Varda; 1976 Les Pornocrates, Jean-François Davy; 2005 Paul Vecchiali en Diagonales, documentary, as himself, Emmanuel Vernières), he also was an assistant director (1965 Passeport diplomatique Agent K8 / Agente Tigre sfida infernale / USA: Operation Diplomatic Passport, Robert Vernay, France / Italy; L'or du Duc, Jacques Baratier, France / Italy), screenwriter (1965 Nick Carter et le Trèfle rouge / Nick Carter e il trifoglio nero, as co-screenwriter, co-dialogist, Jean-Paul Savignac, France / Italy), and supervised the directing of two films (1967 La Loi du Survivant, José Giovanni; 1978 Le Paradis des Riches, Paul Barge). He founded a second company, Diagonales, which produced his own films and a few others (1977 Le Théâtre des Matières, Jean-Claude Biette; 1979 Les Belles Manières, Jean-Claude Guiguet; 1980 Simone Barbès ou La Vertu, Marie-Claude Treilhou; Cauchemar, Noël Simsolo; 1983 Le Goûter de Josette, short, also editor, Gérard Frot-Coutaz; 1986 Beau Temps mais orageux en Fin de Journée / USA: Good Weather, but Stormy Late This Afternoon, also co-editor, Gérard Frot-Coutaz; 1990 La Fille du Magicien, also co-screenwriter, editor, Claudine Bories). He edited the following movies: 1978 Tarzan Jacket (Cécile Clairval); 1982 Lointains Boxeurs (short, Claudine Bories); 1986 Qui trop embrasse (Jacques Davila).

VELLE, GASTON (1872–1948, Paris, France)

A former illusionist, he was hired in 1903 by Pathé, for which he shot trick movies. In 1906, he moved to Italy with his crew and worked as an artistic director for Cines. One year and several Italian films later, he returned to France and Pathé. After 1913, like many other silent directors, he faded into obscurity.

VIGO, JEAN (Jean de Bonaventure Vigo / April 26, 1905, Paris, France—October 5, 1934, Paris, France)

The son of anarchist militant Eugène de Vigo, alias Miguel Amereyda, who was found dead in jail in 1917, he had to leave Paris for Montpellier to hide his real identity. Known as Jean Salles, he spent four years in a school in Nîmes before recovering his name and enrolling in the Sorbonne. He studied philosophy and tried to rehabilitate his father. His poor health led him to Font-Romeu (1927) and then Nice (1928), where he met film directors Claude Autant-Lara and Germaine Dulac, who introduced him to Franco Films. Having settled in Nice, he directed his first film there. His short career was chaotic. His film Zéro de Conduite / USA: Zero for Conduct was banned and remained unrelased until 1945 (only cine-clubs showed it before the official release). Exhausted by tuberculosis, he died of sepsis at age twenty-nine without having time to finalize the projects he wrote (1932 Le Tennis / Cochet, short; Anneaux, short; La Camargue, short; 1935 L'Évadé du Baigne / Le Baigne; Clown par Amour).

YANNE, JEAN (Jean Roger Gouyé / July 18, 1933, Les Lilas, Seine-Saint-Denis, France—May 23, 2003, Morsains, Marne, France)

The son of a lithographer father and a dressmaker mother, he was trained at the Centre de Formation des Journalistes and was only eighteen years old when he began writing in newspapers Paris-Presse and L'Aurore. Soon after switching to radio journalism, he wrote sketches and songs (for Line Renaud and Philippe Clay). He won some fame as a satirical stand-up comedian in the most famous Parisian cabarets (Les Trois Baudets, La Fontaine des Quatre Saisons, L'Amiral). He made his film acting debut in 1963 (La Vie à l'Envers / USA: Life Upside Down, Alain Jessua) and gave strong performances in more than seventy movies. He was at his best in two Claude Chabrol films (1969 Que la Bête meure / Uccidero un uomo / UK: The Beast Must Die / USA: This Man Must Die, France / Italy; 1970 Le Boucher / Il tagliagole / UK and USA: The Butcher, France / Italy) and in Maurice Pialat's Nous ne vieillirons pas ensemble / L'amante giovane / UK: Break-Up / USA: We Won't Grow Old Together (France / Italy; 1972), for which he won the best actor award in 1972 Cannes Film Festival. In 1971 he created his own production company, Ciné Qua Non. The first movie he directed, a satire of advertising, was a huge box-office hit in 1972. He produced or co-produced unconventional films (1974 Touche pas à la Femme blanche / Non toccare a la donna Bianca / US video: Don't Touch the White Woman, Marco Ferreri, France / Italy; La Maman et la Putain / UK and USA: The Mother and the Whore, Jean Eustache; 1974 Lancelot du Lac / Lancillotto e Ginevra / USA: Lancelot of the Lake, Robert Bresson, France / Italy; Flesh for Frankenstein / Andy Warhol's Frankenstein / Chair pour Frankenstein / Carne per Frankenstein / Il mostro è in tavola barone Frankenstein, Paul Morrissey and Antonio Margheriti, USA / France / Italy; Blood for Dracula / Andy Warhol's Dracula / Du Sang pour Dracula / Dracula vuole vivere: Cerca sangue di vegine / Dracula cerca sange di vergine . . . e mori di sete!!!, Paul Morrissey and Antonio Margheriti, USA / France / Italy). In 1969 he wrote the screenplay of a comic book (Les Dossiers du B.I.D.E.: La Langouste ne passera pas, Tito Topin, Editions Casterman). He also authored several humoristic books (2000 Dictionnaire des Mots qu'il y a que moi qui les connais, Plon; 2003 Je suis un être exquis, Le Cherche-Midi editeur; 2005 J'me marre [J'ai Lu]).

ZILBERMANN, JEAN-JACQUES (November 27, 1955, Paris, France—)

He was only sixteen years old when he directed his first Super-8 feature film with Paul Valéry's high school pupils. Two years later, he created the movie group Kino Pravda and shot three political documentaries. Working as a post office employee, he filmed with the collaboration of his colleagues a movie released by the trade union CGT. He soon gave up his state servant status to become projectionist and then owner of two of the greatest Parisian movie theaters (L'Escurial in 1981, rebaptized L'Escurial Panorama in 1983, and the Max Linder [now the Max Linder Panorama], 1986). He resumed his career as a filmmaker in 1993. Co-writer of the movie Des Feux mal éteints (Serge Moati, 1994), he also had an experience as a stage director in 2001 (The Shop Around the Corner, by Miklós László, Théâtre Montparnasse).

He earned a diploma as a commercial artist and took courses at an accounting school. Having trained as a film editor (his aunt Fedora Zincone was an editor in Cinecittà), he cut trailers for producer Mag Bodard before working with Jean-Paul Savignac (1973 Député, documentary), Raymond Depardon (1974 Une Partie de Campagne, documentary), Pierre Barouh (1979 Le Divorcement), Jean-Pierre Mocky (1995 Noir comme le Souvenir, France / Switzerland), and exploitation film director Jean-Marie Pallardy (1977 Le Ricain / USA: The Man from Chicago; 1979 Une Femme spéciale / USA: A Very Special Woman / Kiss Me with Lust / Ready and Willing; 1981 Trois Filles dans le Vent; 1984 Vivre pour survivre / White Fire, also actor, France / Turkey / UK), to whom he was also an assistant director (1978 L'Amour chez les Poids lourds / Grossi bestioni / UK: Erotic Encounters / Truck Stop / US video: Traveling Companions, France / Italy). While editing other filmmakers' movies, he directed a couple of forgettable pictures. In 1997, he co-founded with Anne Saint Dreux the National Center for Advertising Archives (now the House of Advertising).

Filmography

ZINGG, GÉRARD (June 7, 1942, Montfermeil, Seine-Saint-Denis, France—)

The grandson of French painter Jules-Emile Zingg, he was trained at the Sciences Po. He played competitive sports before entering films as a co-screenwriter (1969 Ternos caçadores / Sweet Hunters / Tendres Chasseurs / Jailbird, Ruy Guerra, Brazil / France; 1981 L'Année prochaine . . . si tout va bien / UK and USA: Next Year If All Goes Well, also technical adviser, Jean-Loup Hubert; Histoires extraordinaires, TV, episode "La Lettre volée," Ruy Guerra; 2008 Lucifer et Moi, Jacques Grand-Jouan) and assistant director (1974 Les Valseuses / UK: Getting It Up / USA: Going Places, Bertrand Blier). He also supervised the dubbing and co-wrote the dialogue of Marco Ferreri's La Dernière Femme / L'ultima donna / UK and USA: The Last Woman (France / Italy, 1976). He had previously played the Norman clerk Jean Lohier in Robert Bresson's Le Procès de Jeanne d'Arc / UK and USA: Trial of Joan of Arc (1963, shot in 1961). After being technical adviser to Virginie Thévenet (1985 La Nuit Porte-Jarretelles) and Radovan Tadic (1990 Erreur de Jeunesse, shot in 1988) and the commercial failure of his two feature movies, he devoted himself to painting for fifteen years. He also published several books (1995 L'Heure du Loup; 1999 Loup, où es-tu?, Editions Humus Dumerchez) and appeared as himself in a TV documentary (2007 Dominique Laffin, Portrait d'une Enfant pas sage, Laurent Perrin).

ZULAWSKI, ANDRZEJ (November 22, 1940, Lwow, Poland [now Lviv], Ukraine—)

The son of Polish writer and poet Miroslav Zulawski, he sojourned to Paris (1945–1949) and Czechoslovakia (1949–1952) with his father, who was a foreign affairs and UNESCO civil servant. In 1957, he went back to Paris, where he completed his secondary studies. The same year, he enrolled in the IDHEC. Having graduated in 1959 (his dissertation was about Andrzej Wajda's Kanal), he moved to Poland and entered films as an assistant to Wajda (1961 Samson, also actor; 1962 L'Amour à Vingt Ans / L'amore a vent'anni / Liebe mit zwanzig / Milosc dwudziestolatkow / Hatachi no koi / UK and USA: Love At Twenty (segment "Milosc dwudziestolatkow," France / Italy / West Germany / Poland / Japan; 1965 Popoly / UK and USA: The Ashes, Andrzej Wajda). He also studied philosophy at Varsovia and wrote poems and criticism (published in the Polish review Film). After having many troubles with Polish censorship—his novel Kino was seized, and the second film he directed, Diabel, was banned—he came back to Paris, where he shot his first French film in 1974. He authored several novels (1987 Il était un Verger, Stock; 2003 L'Infidélité, Agnès Pareyre; 2004 Comme un Rien, Calmann-Lévy) and a collection of short stories (1981 Les Choses de la Chair, Editions Jean-Claude Lattès). He played a leading role in a French movie (1985 Tristesse et Beauté, Joy Fleury) and a supporting part in Josée Dayan's TV movie Les Liaisons dangereuses / USA: Dangerous Liaisons (2 × 126'; France / UK / Canada).

REVIEWS

1895. Paris, France, 54 issues published by the Association Française de Recherche sur l'Histoire du Cinéma (AFRHC) from 1984 to 2008.

To the books and the review listed here, I have to add two essential websites: Internet Movie Database, <http://imdb.com> (despite some inevitable but regularly corrected mistakes), and the best French movie website, Les Gens du Cinéma, <http://www.lesgensducinema.com>. Thanks to the rigor and the vigilance of its founder, André Siscot, and the accuracy of the information provided by his collaborators. Les Gens du Cinéma is an Ali Baba's cave for movie buffs.
